

Joshua A. Barnett, B.Arch'13

Vice President | Design & Development | Rendina Healthcare Real Estate

Joshua A. Barnett is vice president of Design & Development at Rendina Healthcare Real Estate, which is a recognized leader in healthcare real estate development and a trusted real estate partner for health systems, hospitals, and medical groups throughout the country. Josh brings over 12 years of healthcare project management experience ranging from small-scale hospital department renovations and tenant improvements, to large-scale hospital campus expansion projects and new ground-up outpatient facilities.

He earns the trust of his clients through his management approach and ability to multi-task while remaining highly organized and detail-oriented. His hands-on approach to project delivery is focused on developing solutions that advance a client's mission and achieve their goals while remaining thoughtful of budget, schedule, and design.

Prior to joining Rendina, Josh worked for notable design firms in New York City and Boston where he was involved in all aspects of project delivery from project initiation and programming through completion and occupancy. Josh holds a Bachelor of Architecture degree from The Boston Architectural College and is a licensed architect in New York and New Jersey.

Beyond his work, Josh is deeply engaged in the future of the profession and has represented architects at both the local and national level through his active involvement and many committee appointments with the American Institute of Architects, Academy of Architecture for Health, National Council of Architectural Registration Boards, and his town's local planning board.
